October — Breast Cancer and Black Women

Did you know...?

Black women face higher breast cancer mortality and are more likely to develop breast cancer before age 40.

Triple Negative Breast Cancer is more aggressive, has higher mortality rate and is more common among black women.

Screening Recommendations

Begin mammograms at age 40.

Those with a family history may need earlier screening. Regular breast awareness, clinical exams, and additional imaging such as ultrasound or MRI may also be recommended.

Prevention

Eat healthy, stay active, maintain a healthy weight, limit alcohol, and avoid smoking. Know your family history—genetic testing and earlier screening may help identify your risk.

Know Your Family History.

If breast cancer runs in your family, there are genetic tests to assess your risk, you may need to avoid some hormonal drugs and need earlier screening.
